AMERICA'S FAVORITE

"DID you ever live in a rookery?" asked Sammy Squirrel.

"No," answered Professor Oscar Owl. "Land birds like robins, bluebirds, sparrows, owls and the rest of us never live in rookeries. Only seabirds like gulls, terns, pelicans and penguins live there."

"What is a rookery?" asked Roscoe Rabbit.

"It's a place where birds who like company live together. But only birds of a feather. You never see gulls and penguins in the same one. It's got to be all pelicans or all gulls or whatever. Some like marshy places with plenty of sea-weed around. Others prefer a rocky shore or a sandy beach. Almost any place will do as long as it's handy to the salt water, and big enough to hold anywhere from a thousand to a million of them. They like to be near the seashore, because that's where breakfast, lunch and dinner is. And they just love to be among plenty of friends. So much for the facts.

"But I knew a penguin once, named Percy, who had other ideas. He had them right from the first time he was able to peek out of the nest where he was hatched. He couldn't even talk that day—all he did was point and say one word. He stretched his neck out of the nest, his eyes popped, and he poked his mother in the ribs with one flipper, and pointed with the other.

"'Goo-goo?' said Percy.

"'Who—them?' said his mother. 'Those are penguins.'

"Percy turned around, and pointed in another direction.

"'Goo-goo?' asked Percy.

"'They're penguins too,' said his mother.

"Percy turned to the other directions, pointed again, and said, 'Goo-goo.' Each time, his mother told him they were penguins also. Finally, Percy looked up at her and said:

"'Goo-goo?'

"'How many?' answered his mother. 'Oh—the last time we counted ourselves there were exactly seven hundred sixty-two thousand, four hundred and eight. And Priscilla Penguin, who was hatched yesterday, makes it four hundred nine. Now you be a good boy while mama fetches you a fresh sardine for lunch!'

"Well, as Percy grew up he worried and fretted more and more about the great number of penguins. And then the day came when he was big enough to leave the nest, and take a real look around.

"It was like going to a Carnival or Amusement Park, where they have a Hall Of Mirrors. All Percy saw was seven hundred sixty-two thousand, four hundred and nine Percys. Nobody had even a wart or a freckle to make him look different from anybody else. Percy put his flippers over his eyes, shuddered, and then dashed for home. When he got there, he started talking angrily.

"'Say, mother,' he said to the penguin near the nest, 'I can't understand why . . .'

"'Who are you speaking to, young man?' said the penguin. 'I never saw you before in my life. What's your name?'

"'Percy,' said Percy.

"'Oh,' said the penguin. 'Your mother will be right back. She asked me to keep an eye out for you, but she didn't tell me what you looked like.'

"Well, Percy almost fainted when the penguin said that. If there was one thing that Percy looked like, it was a penguin. But how anybody could tell one from another was a mystery.

"'Tell me, Mrs. Penguin,' began Percy.

"'Mr.,' said the penguin. 'Mr. Paul Penguin.'

"'Well, all right, Mr. Penguin,' said Percy. 'Who's the king of us penguins?'

"'Nobody,' said Paul.

"'Well, who's president then?' asked Percy.

"'Nobody,' said Paul.

"'Well, who's boss, or premier or chief or ruler or governor or leader or what-have-you?' asked Percy.

"'Nobody,' said Paul. 'We're all exactly alike and equal. We don't have a Congress or laws or taxes or anything.'

"'Well, what do you—I mean we—have to talk about?' asked Percy.

"'The weather,' said Paul.

"'What do you say about it?' said Percy.

"'It's cold today,' said Paul. 'And now, I see your mother coming, so I'll run along.'

"Paul Penguin walked off, leaving Percy to think things over. But he didn't say anything when his mother returned—not even Hello. He was afraid of making another mistake.

"'What's the matter, dear?' said she. 'Catfish got your tongue?'

"'No ma'am,' said Percy.

"'Some weather we're having,' said his mother. 'It's cold today isn't it?'

"'Yes ma'am,' said Percy.

"Well," concluded Professor Owl, "the next morning Percy disappeared from the penguin rookery, and was never seen again by any of them. And strange to say, Percy wound up with only one subject to talk about after all."

"What was that?" asked Sammy Squirrel.

"The weather."

"And who did he talk it over with?" asked Roscoe Rabbit.

"Himself," said Professor Owl.

"How come?" asked Sammy.

"Well, the day he disappeared, he had taken a long walk away from the rookery. An explorer saw him, captured him, and brought him to a Zoo where they had a big bird house. Percy was the only penguin in the place, and none of the other birds could understand penguin language. But the bird-house was nice and comfy, and Percy the solitary penguin, was happy.

"'Some weather we're having, isn't it?' Percy would ask.

"'Yes,' Percy would answer. 'It's warm today.'"

BILL STARTS AN AIR RIFLE CLUB

All the fun began when Bill mailed a coupon to Daisy for "HOW TO START A JUNIOR AIR RIFLE CLUB" booklet. A FEW DAYS LATER...

Bill and his parents eagerly read every word in the booklet...

This Club Idea sounds swell, Dad. But I'll have to have an air rifle!

OK, Bill . . . I'll get you one after I help you get the Air Rifle Club started . . . so you cann learn to handle and shoot it safely under adult supervision.

You see, Mr. Editor, an Air Rifle Club sponsored by your newspaper will render a great public service to the youngsters, parents and citizens of this town.

We'll print a story asking local groups to sponsor an air rifle program. The police like the idea . . . so does the school superintendent . . . so do the ministers. Your name will be in the paper, Bill!

(Gulp) OH BOY!

The Air Rifle Club Idea spread like magic! Clubs were sponsored by the YMCA, YWCA, American Legion and V.F.W. Posts, Lions Club, Civitan, Optimists, Rotary, etc. Each club met weekly to shoot for official NRA medals and win baseball gloves, flashlights, other prizes. The short 15 foot NRA range distance made indoor shooting possible almost anywhere. Then 5 months later...

Following the city-wide Air Rifle Championship Shoot for 100 Club Members:

Congratulations on winning, Bill! You really started something wonderful when you sent for that Air Rifle Club Booklet!

Thanks, Mr. Mayor! These Air Rifle Clubs are as much sport as baseball. We didn't know organized shooting could be such fun!
